

| Business Litigation

Business disputes can be complicated, disruptive, and expensive. They impact business relationships, divert crucial time and resources away from a company's business goals, and create risk in terms of publicity and the bottom line. Our Business Litigation group understands these realities and, from day one, we assess the risks and rewards to determine the best solutions for our clients, while always demonstrating a readiness to take each case to trial or hearing. Whichever direction a dispute may take, we provide careful, efficient, and value-conscious service to help clients meet their objectives and protect their businesses.

Our trial-tested group has experience with a broad range of matters. We routinely handle deal-related litigation, products liability cases, real estate disputes, consumer fraud actions, and trademark disputes for some of the most well-recognized brands. Our clients include hospitality, manufacturing, life sciences, health care, and utility companies, and we appear in courts and arbitrations across the United States. We combine proven experience, knowledge, and dedication to each matter, seamlessly blending analytical skills with staunch advocacy. We are particularly adept at synthesizing sprawling claims and addressing complex cases in an efficient and cost-effective manner. We rely on legal project management to enhance and measure our efforts, and offer alternative fee arrangements when it is in our clients' best interests to do so.

Most important, we build long-term relationships with our clients. We learn their businesses, their industries, and their cultures to deliver on our value-driven approach.
