Paul focuses his practice on intellectual property matters, including preparation and prosecution of U.S. and international patent applications, patent appeals, and design patents. His background in electrical engineering informs his strategic counsel on patents related to electronics, software, Internet technologies, and computer technology.

From startups to Fortune 100 companies, clients value Paul's advice on intellectual property considerations arising in mergers and acquisitions and venture capital transactions. He has over a decade of patent experience, and his ability to identify the impact of these matters on patent holders' assets has contributed to his outstanding track record in strengthening intellectual property portfolios.
