Jordana's practice is devoted to helping clients navigate all aspects of financial restructuring by identifying and implementing innovative solutions and strategies aimed at maximizing recovery. She advises clients on all facets of complex Chapter 11 reorganizations, workout proceedings, and corporate trust matters and represents clients ranging from indenture trustees and agents to creditors' committees, lenders, and debtors.

Jordana is often the trusted advisor to a wide array of clients in the enforcement of creditors' rights involving secured, unsecured, public, or private debt through her work with indenture trustees, agents, debtor-in-possession lenders, and official committees in Chapter 11 cases. Her restructuring experience spans numerous industries, including health care and hospitals, energy, retail, hospitality, municipal finance, and real estate.

By remaining current on recent developments relevant to her clients, Jordana provides proactive guidance and often writes on or speaks about the latest bankruptcy trends.

Bankruptcy & Restructuring Department partner Jordana L. Renert tells Bloomberg that statistics show that an increase in debt exchange transactions may account, in part, for the record low number of U.S. bankruptcy filings in the first half of 2021. She compares these distressed exchanges to "putting a Band-Aid on the situation for now.... It improves short-term liquidity and reduces debt but doesn't really fix a company's problems." Renert says that factors such as another Covid-19 surge, rising interest rates, and inflation may lead to "a massive wave of bankruptcies, [but] I don't think anybody can tell you when at this point."
